Highlights from the 9/25/08 AACEI-CSRA Dinner Meeting

The AACIE-CSRA Section's September dinner meeting featured Mr. Elliott Levy, Executive Director of the Aiken County Historical Museum. AACEI-CSRA Section President, Ronny McIver, introduced Mr. Levy as the person who "can put more names and specifics to the history of Aiken, SC than anyone in the area."

Mr. Levy provided us with an evening full of colorful local history, focusing on how a small South Carolina town has continually changed throughout the years. "Just like any good business - if you do not constantly re-invent yourself, you will not survive the future." Mr. Levy shared his perspective on breathing new life into the Aiken Museum and the cost challenges of managing a non-profit organization. Housed in a former winter colony mansion, the museum displays items that reflect the county's history from the earliest settlers to the present. Mr. Levy described how he leveraged the limited museum budget to improve its focus on significant events in Aiken history within the confines of limited museum space. То accomplish this, Mr. Levy redesigned the museum layout in the 14,000 square foot historic mansion, to better reflect the significance of each exhibit.

Speaking to a crowd of over 20, Mr. Levy shared many anecdotal pieces of area history and the CSRA's path to continual business, cultural, and agricultural growth. In the 1830's, William Aiken, from Charleston, raised $956K to build railroad from Charleston, SC to Hamburg, SC. The original route did not include the Aiken area due to the difficulty of the steep grade (600 ft above sea level) required to reach to Hamburg. But the surveyor, AA Dexter, found a way to route the railroad through Aiken to appease his prospective father-in-law, William Williams, one of the largest land owners in what is now Aiken, SC. The completion of the railroad, 2 weeks before the marriage, ensured the prosperity and future business of the Aiken community. Several textile mills and other factories were subsequently built in the area.

Elliott Levy, Aiken Historical Museum Curator, received an appreciation Plaque from AACEI-CSRA President Ronny McIver.

Following the completion of the railroad, Aiken soon became the favorite "winter colony" for many wealthy and influential people, including members of the Rockefeller family. The Midland Valley area brought a different kind of crowd. "It was known as Little Chicago because the gangsters from Chicago came," he said.

Aiken is also a county of many firsts. For eight years after the completion of the railroad in 1834, Aiken boasted the longest railroad in the world for 8 years. Aiken was the asparagus capital of the world from 1925 – 1934, and "was the smallest community to have a liberty ship named after it," said Mr. Levy. "It took 18 days to build, and it was women who built it during World War II. That changed the American labor force." The 1950's brought even more changes to the area with the building of the Savannah River Site, which has continued to evolve through the years to its current status as one of the largest employers in the CSRA area. Aiken is also home for the Center for Hydrogen Research, focused on creating an environment where hydrogen and fuel cell expertise and technologies can be easily used to create cost-effective and consumer-accepted products and services.

> Mr. Levy captivated the audiences and left many of us wanting to visit the Aiken County Museum to learn more!
